Catchment area of the Dr. RMLIMS is one of the highest incidence areas for Gallbladder Cancer. Besides, there are a number of poor female patients who visit from remote interior villages suffering from cancer of breast, cervix, uterus and ovary. Many of these poor patients going through the late stages of Cancer have undergone suboptimal treatment elsewhere near their villages. The project aims to reach such patients and help to examine and screen patients/people with any signs/symptoms of cancer while spreading awareness regarding the disease.

The objective behind extending financial assistance is to strengthen the quality and delivery of healthcare services amongst the local populous of Lucknow and adjoining areas which is important to ensure accessibility and availability of healthcare services to the urban poor communities. PFC aims to improve health outcomes among rural/urban population with focus on overall healthcare.

As India's leading public sector enterprise and a responsible corporate, PFC is committed to ensuring overall development of the society by extending financial support for various developmental initiatives in the areas of Health, Education and Skill Development.
